NEBRASKA SPELLS "SPORTSMANSHIP"

The University of Nebraska is known and respected all over the nation for its red-attired fans, as well as its football teams.

Nebraska fans also have a nationwide reputation for good sportsmanship, at home and away.

"Big League"—that's the way Nebraska teams and fans have acquitted themselves in past seasons, and that's the same goal for 1988.

The University of Nebraska urges all Husker fans to continue this fine tradition of sportsmanship by extending courtesy to the visiting teams and officials.

All of us on the Cornhusker Staff salute our fans as the greatest in the nation and thank you for your support and sportsmanship.

Yours for Nebraska.

ON THE COVER: With Nebraska's 47-16 win over ASU last week, Coach Osborne earned his 150th career victory and tied Barry Switzer for the Big Eight record of most victories.

Husker Salute . . .

When Terry Rodgers gained 16 yards on NU's famous pitch-right play last week against Arizona State, he topped the 100-yard rushing mark, and gave the Husker offense three 100-yard rushers for the day. The sophomore from National City, Calif., finished with 13 carries for a career-best 113 yards, and scored a touchdown in the Huskers' 47-16 romp over Arizona State. Rodgers was the Huskers' nominee for Big Eight Offensive Player of the Week honors.

Nebraska vs. UNLV

The Scouting Report

by Tom Simons

TODAY: It's the final 1988 non-conference game for Nebraska as the Huskers host the University of Nevada-Las Vegas Rebels in the 158th consecutive sellout in Memorial Stadium. Both NU, 3-1-0, and UNLV, 1-2-0, are coming off come-from-behind non-conference wins last weekend. Playing before a national television (ESPN) audience, Nebraska fell behind Arizona State early, 13-9, came back to take a 30-16 halftime lead, then roared away in the fourth quarter for a 47-16 win over the Sun Devils. UNLV trailed Ohio University, 15-7, at the end of the first quarter last Saturday night at Las Vegas, but came back to post its first win of the season, 26-18. The clincher was a school-record, 53-yard field goal by Jim Cook with 5:33 left.

THE COACHES: Last Saturday's win over Arizona State marked the 150th career coaching victory for Nebraska headman Tom Osborne (Hastings, 1959), who now owns a 16-year career mark of 150-35-2 for an .807 winning percentage. Dr. Tom ranks as the third-winningest active coach in NCAA Division I-A, trailing Barry Switzer of Oklahoma (150-27-4 for .840) and Joe Paterno of Penn State (209-49-2 for .808). A Nebraska win today would move Osborne ahead of Paterno by the smallest of fractions, no matter what Penn State does tonight at Temple. The Rebels' Wayne Nunnely (UNLV, 1975) is 12-13-0 in his third year as head coach, all at his alma mater.

THE SERIES: First meeting. The Huskers are 7-0-0 all time against members of the Big West Conference, including a 63-13 win over Utah State here, Sept. 3. Nevada-Las Vegas is in its first-ever outing against a Big Eight foe.

TRIPLE HUNDRED: Last Saturday's win over Arizona State made Nebraska football history as three Husker runners reached the 100-yard mark for the first time in history. I-backs Ken Clark and Terry Rodgers recorded career rushing highs with 122 and 113 yards, respectively, while quarterback Steve Taylor added 116 yards. Nebraska had been close to the triple hundred several times previously, including last year's Iowa State game when Keith Jones had 240 and Tyreese Knox 118, while Taylor settled for 96. Against ASU, Clark, Taylor and Rodgers emphatically ended a Husker 100-yard drought in which NU had just one 100-yard rusher in the last six games—Jones' 248 at Colorado last year.

ABOUT UNLV: The Rebel's win over Ohio U. last week gave them their first win, following losses at Baylor, 27-3, and at home to Big West foe Fullerton State, 20-10. Nunnely returns 38 of 63 lettermen, including 12 starters, from last year's 5-6-0 team which tied for second in what was then known as the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Eight of the 12 returning starters are on offense, but of the three starters lost, one was last year's NCAA rushing champ. Ickey Woods ran for 1,658 yards for UNLV in 1987, averaging 150.7 yards per game, but now totes the ball for the NFL Cincinnati Bengals.

TNT NEAR MILESTONE: Nebraska's All-America duo of quarterback Steve Taylor and outside linebacker Broderick Thomas are each bearing down on career milestones, and could get them in the next couple of games. Taylor comes into today with 3,790 career total offense yards, fifth on the Nebraska all-time list, and thus needs 210 to become the fifth Nebraska player to reach 4,000 total offense yards. He also has 47 career total-offense touchdowns (23 rushing, 24 passing) and needs three to become only the third to record 50. He's six short of Dave Humm's record of 53. Meanwhile, Thomas comes into today's game with 186 total tackles in his career, and thus needs 14 to become the 13th Husker to record 200 career tackles. Included in his total tackles are 114 unassisted stops, the sixth-highest total in Nebraska history. He needs 43 in his last eight games to tie the school record of 157 set by Steve Damkroger from 1979-82.

BIG EIGHT HONOR: FS Tim Jackson was named the Big Eight Defensive Player of the Week for his efforts against AUS last Saturday. He intercepted two passes, returned them 55 yards and had four tackles (three solo).

Leading the Rebels . . .

UNLV All-America candidate Jim Cook is the Rebels' senior placekicker from Las Vegas, Nev. He is the leading returning scorer in the Big West Conference and was named to the second-team All-PCAA squad last season as he scored 72 points for UNLV. Cook nailed all 27 PATS last year, is 3-3 this season, and 51-52 overall. He has hit 32-40 field goals in his career.

NU's New Fullback Hopes To Reel In Big Season

By Ben Boyle

While growing up in California, Tyreese Knox spent his spare time fishing for perch in the Pacific Ocean. Now he is perched at the top of the depth chart as Nebraska's new starting fullback.

Knox entered fall camp as the heir apparent to two-time All-Big Eight I-back, Keith Jones, but a nagging hamstring injury kept him out of practice for over a week while Ken Clark and Terry Rodgers emerged at that position.

When Knox returned to full speed he was third on the depth chart, but ironically, a rash of injuries at fullback gave Knox the chance to prove his talent elsewhere.

Although he would prefer to line up seven yards deep and carry the ball 20 times a game, Knox may be more valuable at fullback where he can use his size (5-10, 215 pounds) and speed (4.5 in the 40) as an effective blocker and runner.

"It's my senior season and I just want to get out there and try to contribute to the team and play as much as I can," Knox said. "We were in a desperate situation at fullback, so I said I would do whatever it takes."

Knox saw his first extensive action of the season in last Saturday's 47-16 win over Arizona State. He rushed four times for 26 yards, but it was his blocking that caught the eye of the coaching staff.

"I haven't looked at all the films, but it looks like he did a good job of blocking," running back coach Frank Solich said. "Considering the little time he had to prepare, Tyreese did real well running our offense from the fullback position."

Now that he is contributing again, Knox can concentrate on reaching some of the goals he set before the season. "I really wanted to have an awesome running game this year," he said. "I also wanted to have an undefeated season and UCLA took care of that, but we can still win the Big Eight and beat those Sooners."

Although his role in the Huskers' high-powered offense has changed, Knox will still see the ball enough to become Nebraska's 31st player to rush for more than 1,000 career yards. He enters today's game with 952, but Knox is hoping to show his abilities in other areas as well.

"In most cases, people are looking for all-around versatile backs," he said. "You have to be able to block, catch the ball and run, so this is giving me some good experience."

When Knox isn't busy breaking tackles, he likes to spend time with his fishing tackle.

I'm an outdoorsman. I don't like to be indoors cleaning the house," he said. "I like to be outdoors doing adventurous stuff and I've been able to do a lot of good fishing out here which has been really fun."

In fact, Knox has had just as much success in small Nebraska lakes as he's had in the ocean.

"I've caught a 10-pound bass in the ocean, but I caught a 12-pound catfish at a little lake near Bennett, Neb.," he said. "Some friends took me out there and I was like 'wow, I'll be back.'"

However, Knox was reluctant to give up the exact location of his favorite fishing hole.

"I don't like fishing where the public comes out a lot because they fish those places out," he said. "So, I like those little farm ponds that not too many people know about—where the fish can grow up a little bit."

"I went out there and caught that big one and I was really excited," he added. "I had been fishing at this other pond, catching 2-pound catfish, which was hardly enough for a meal."

And once he's caught his dinner, Knox trades in his rod and reel for pots and pans.

"Back home, my mom made us take turns cooking during the week," he said. "I do most of the cooking, or I should say I used to do most of the cooking, but I had to cut that down."

Knox's roommate is starting defensive tackle Willie Griffin, whose ideal playing weight has been a constant concern of the coaching staff.

"I don't want to take the blame," Knox added. "But Willie can get in there and do his thing too. He's not going to go hungry, believe me."

Knox has been hungry all season, waiting for a chance to play, and he's anxious to show what he can do as Nebraska's No. 1 fullback.

"Even though I haven't played much this year, I've heard comments that the scouts are still interested in me," he said. "I would like to play at a higher level, make a little fortune, and then get out and start my own business."

Senior Tyreese Knox needs 48 yards today to become Nebraska's 31st 1000-yard rusher.

Chancellor's Club

The University of Nebraska—Lincoln intends to become one of the top research universities in the nation by the beginning of the twenty-first century. To achieve this goal, we have begun to develop multidisciplinary centers of research excellence in carefully targeted areas of science and technology that will have national significance. This effort will necessitate building greater faculty strength in selected subject matter areas and providing them with the necessary facilities and equipment that will enable them to obtain substantial external funds for their research programs. In addition, we will continue to give a top priority to maintaining and improving the resources of our University Libraries, which collectively constitute our most important laboratory.

The University Libraries form the intellectual core of UNL as a major research university, and we take pride in being a member of the prestigious Association of Research Libraries. The quality of research and teaching in every field depends upon the availability of the latest knowledge, and our libraries are a crucial educational resource for UNL faculty, students, the citizens of Nebraska, and scholars throughout the world.

Research libraries throughout the nation, including those at UNL, have been experiencing a rapid escalation in the cost of all library materials, especially serial subscriptions, at a time when library budgets have not kept pace. At UNL, for example, the allocations for the acquisition of new materials have increased at an average annual rate of six percent during the past five years. During this same time period, serials costs have increased at a rate ranging from twelve to twenty percent. Compounding this problem has been the ever-increasing number of new journals being published to support developing areas of knowledge.

As a temporary solution, UNL and eight other research universities in this region have joined forces to develop a common database to assure that at least one of the members will maintain every important serial. While UNL recognizes that even the wealthiest research libraries cannot hope to acquire and maintain all scholarly materials, I believe we must increase permanent funding for library materials by at least one million dollars during the next few years.

In addition to library acquisitions, it has become increasingly important for UNL to upgrade access to scholarly materials by automating the University Libraries' cataloging, search, and informational exchange programs. UNL has requested substantial funding for library enhancement in its proposed 1989-91 biennial budget, and library automation is now one of the top priorities within the University of Nebraska Foundation's new fundraising initiative.

During the past year, the University Libraries have earned national recognition in several areas. In August, the libraries were designated as an Early English Books Research Center by University Microfilms International, a leading provider of research materials. Earlier in the summer, UNL announced the successful restoration of an original copy of the Nuremberg Chronicle, an eclectic world history written by Hartmann Schedel of Nuremberg, Germany, and printed in 1493. The Friends of the UNL Libraries, incorporated in 1987 to support library improvement, funded the restoration.

I believe that we must aggressively and creatively seek to deal successfully with the serious challenges being experienced by the University Libraries if UNL is to achieve the goal of substantially increasing its stature as a major research university with our multidisciplinary centers of excellence recognized both nationally and internationally. I ask for your continued support in achieving this crucial goal for our University.

EIGHT GREATS MAKE IT THE BIG EIGHT CONFERENCE

The Big Eight Conference has withstood the test of time, with membership remaining stable while maintaining total athletic involvement. But, what has been the degree of success attained by the Big Eight?

From the outside, the power of a conference is measured by a national yardstick of victories and competitiveness. From inside the Conference, the standard is equated by combining the intra-league balance of the total sports program -- a balance that stimulates the competition within -- with the degree of success gained against non-conference foes.

How did it look last year nationally for the Big Eight? The Conference membership had a combined 28 Top-20 finishes in 15-of-21 league sanctioned sports, including national championships in men's basketball and men's gymnastics and national runnerup honors in men's basketball and men's golf. The success in 1987-88 on the national scale looked like this:

Football -- Oklahoma 3rd, Nebraska 6th and Oklahoma State 11th in the final polls.

Cross Country -- Nebraska men 13th and Colorado men 15th; Colorado women 12th and Kansas State women 16th.

Volleyball -- Oklahoma and Nebraska in NCAA Tournament.

Indoor Track -- Kansas State/Oklahoma men T12th and Kansas T19th; Nebraska women 5th and Missouri women 17th.

Wrestling -- Iowa State 3rd, Oklahoma State 4th, Oklahoma 8th and Missouri T19th.

Swimming -- Nebraska men 10th and Iowa State men 20th.

Gymnastics -- Nebraska men NCAA CHAMPS, Oklahoma men 8th; Nebraska women 10th.

Basketball -- Kansas men NCAA CHAMPS, Oklahoma men 2nd, Kansas State men in final eight.

Carl James
Commissioner

Carl Settergren
Chairman

James O'Hanlon
Vice-Chair

Golf -- Oklahoma/Oklahoma State men T2nd; Oklahoma State women 12th.

Softball -- Nebraska T5th.

Baseball -- Oklahoma State in regional final.

Outdoor Track -- Nebraska women 5th.

On the intra-league scale, each Conference team finished first or second in at least two sports, with six of eight institutions winning league championships. The 1987-88 Big Eight champions were:

Football -- Oklahoma

Cross Country -- Iowa State men; Colorado women

Volleyball --- Oklahoma

Indoor Track -- Nebraska men; Nebraska women

Outdoor Track -- Iowa State men; Nebraska women

The Big Eight has not had a change in membership since Oklahoma State joined the fold in 1959. Only one other conference in the nation can boast equal longevity. Now in its 82nd year, the Conference has been able to exist and prosper because of that continuity and a common bond in historical background, as well as the academic and athletic philosophies.

The Big Eight was created to help provide a forum for the development of intercollegiate athletic programs of the member institutions and to supervise the activities. The Big Eight was also created to establish standards,

Big Eight football teams have played for the mythical national title in four of the last eight Orange Bowl classics. In men's basketball, the Big Eight has participated in two of the last three Final Fours and Conference members Kansas and Oklahoma played for the national crown in 1988.

Wrestling -- Oklahoma State

Swimming -- Nebraska men; Kansas women

Gymnastics -- Nebraska men; Nebraska women

Basketball -- Oklahoma men; Nebraska women

Tennis -- Kansas men; Oklahoma State women

Golf -- Oklahoma State men; Oklahoma State women

Softball -- Nebraska

Baseball -- Oklahoma State

promote scholarship and high ideals in sportsmanship, and to formulate principles and disseminate information regarding the proper place of athletics in the academic structure.

It has been this commitment that has made Iowa State, Kansas State and Oklahoma State, as well as the universities of Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma, the 'Eight Greats' of the Midlands.

Athletic Director Bob Devaney

Bob Devaney ranks as one of the finest football coaches in college history, after his colorful 16-year career at Wyoming and Nebraska, and now ranks as one of the nation's most outstanding athletic directors.

Devaney is in his 27th year of providing drive, leadership and pride in the Cornhusker athletic program. He arrived in 1962, charged with the mission of building a successful football program, and he succeeded far beyond anyone's expectations. During an 11-year stint as Husker football coach, Devaney's teams won 101, lost only 20 and tied two for a winning percentage of .829. His career mark of 136-30-7 (.806) ranked him as the winningest coach in the nation at the time of his retirement in 1973. Devaney's teams won eight Big Eight titles and two consecutive national championships during the 1962-72 span, with his teams going to nine bowl games. His teams twice won four consecutive Big Eight titles.

Devaney's 1971 team, which posted a 13-0 record and twice played for the national championship (beating Oklahoma, 35-31, in the "Game of the Century," and Alabama, 38-6, in the Orange Bowl), has been hailed as the best college team of all time. Bob was inducted into the National Football Hall of Fame in 1981.

Since becoming athletic director in 1967, Devaney has brought the same success to the overall Husker athletic program that he brought to the football program. Under his leadership, Nebraska annually sets the pace in the Big Eight all-sports race with solid entries in all men's and women's sports.

Under Devaney's guidance, Memorial Stadium has been enlarged, artificial turf has been installed and replaced three times, a stadium office building was constructed, and sports facilities such as the Otto and Gladys Baumann Baseball Complex, Buck Beltzer Baseball Stadium, Ed Weir Track, a new track office building and the women's softball stadium have come into being.

It was Devaney's leadership, working in conjunction with the Nebraska Legislature, that resulted in the passage of a special cigarette tax to provide funds for a new athletic complex, the beautiful basketball arena, indoor track, swimming and other sports building, which opened on the State Fair Grounds in 1976. University of Nebraska Regents recognized Devaney's contributions to that four-and-a-half-acre structure by naming it the Bob Devaney Sports Center in 1978.

Devaney currently spearheads a fund-raising drive to provide the University of Nebraska with a new Faculty-Student Recreation Center, as well as the Cook Pavilion indoor workout facility.

Devaney received many other honors during his coaching career. He was named Coach of the Year by the Walter Camp Foundation, the Football Writers of America, Football News and the Washington TD Club in 1971; and he was tabbed to coach in numerous all-star games, such as the Hula Bowl, Coaches All-American, Blue-Gray and East-West Shrine. He also coached the College All-Stars against the Dallas Cowboys in the 1972 Chicago game.

A graduate of Alma (Michigan) College in 1939, Devaney served as a high school coach at Big Beaver, Keego Harbor, Saginaw and Alpena in Michigan before joining Biggie Munn and Duffy Daugherty at Michigan State. In 1957 he became head coach at Wyoming, where his teams posted a 35-10-5 record.

Devaney is married to the former Phyllis Wiley. They have a son, Mike, and a daughter, Pat, both graduates of the University of Nebraska. Bob and Phyllis also have two grandchildren. □

Tom Osborne: Head Football Coach/ Assistant Athletic Director

Husker Coach Continues as Winner and Leader

Tom Osborne heads into his 16th season as a head coach—all at Nebraska—once again ranked among the "Big Three" of college football.

Osborne takes a remarkable 147-34-2 record into 1988. That makes him No. 3 among the winningest active coaches in Division I-A of the NCAA, and he's just a blink away from the No. 2 spot held by Penn State's legendary Joe Paterno.

While Dr. Tom has long held "legendary" status in Nebraska, his fame is spreading throughout the nation as he continues to build Big Eight powerhouses each fall. During the past 15 years, Osborne's teams all have finished in the Top 10 and all have gone a-bowling, while averaging 10.2 wins per season. No other coach in the 1980s can make that claim.

Osborne's .8087 winning percentage trails only Paterno's mark of .8093 and Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer's .843 among the active coaches in I-A. Since succeeding Hall of Fame coach Bob Devaney in 1973, Tom has won nine or more games in every season.

During the past eight years, his teams have won the national rushing title four times, and have finished second once and third twice. In 1987, Osborne's Huskers were third in national rushing, third in scoring and second in total offense.

With Tom at the helm, Nebraska has run its string of consecutive bowl bids to 19 and its Top-10 streak to 18, both current national records.

Adding even more luster to Osborne's coaching career is the fact that the Cornhuskers have made history by producing three consecutive Outland Trophy winners (Dave Rimington in 1981 and 1982 and Dean Steinkuhler in 1983) and two consecutive Lombardi winners (Rimington in 1982 and Steinkuhler in 1983), while also winning the 1983 Heisman Trophy (Mike Rozier).

During Tom's 15-year career, the Huskers have produced 32 All-America players and 25 Academic All-America players, as well as seven NCAA postgraduate scholarship winners and three National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Scholar-Athlete recipients.

Only two Osborne-coached teams have finished lower than second in the Big Eight—the 1976 team, which tied for fourth but was only one game out of a first-ever three-way tie for first, and his 1986 10-2 team, which lost to Colorado and Oklahoma. His teams have won or shared in the conference title six times in the past 13 years (1975, 1978, 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984).

He has three times been named Big Eight coach of the year (1975, 1978 and 1980), and five times been named District VI coach of the year by the American Football Coaches Association and Kodak (1978, 1979, 1980, 1983 and 1987). In addition, in 1978 he was named Bobby Dodds national coach of the year by the Atlanta Quarterback Club and Delta Air Lines for his efforts toward the advancement of the higher and more notable aspects of college coaching. And in 1983 Football News named Osborne national coach of the year.

In 1982 he was the first recipient of the Distinguished Nebraskaland Award from the Nebraskaland Foundation, and in 1983 he was named national coach of the year by the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Osborne, who graduated from Hastings College in 1959 before logging pro time with the Washington Redskins and San Francisco 49ers, joined Devaney as an assistant in 1962. In 1965 he received his Ph.D. in educational psychology, then chose football coaching as a career. He coached the Husker receivers and helped build the NU offense into one of the most potent in the nation during the 1970 and 1971 national championship years.

While Osborne was a newcomer to the head coaching ranks in 1973, he was no stranger to Nebraska football. Osborne was a member of Bob Devaney's incomparable staff for 11 years—the last six as a key organizer of a steamroller offense.

During his tenure on the Devaney staff, Osborne headed the passing game strategy and coached the receivers. When Devaney announced his retirement from coaching in favor of full-time athletic director duties following the 1971 season, he named Osborne as his successor. Osborne served as assistant head coach and director of recruiting in Devaney's final campaign in 1972, then took the head coaching reins in 1973.

An outstanding high school athlete at Hastings (Neb.) High School in the mid-1950s, Osborne was named Nebraska prep athlete of the year. Passing up major-college offers, Osborne became a star quarterback and basketball player for Hastings College, where both his father and grandfather had matriculated. At Hastings he played both football and basketball for Coach Tom McLaughlin, who was elected to the Nebraska Football Hall of Fame in 1982. In 1959 Osborne was named state college athlete of the year—the first athlete in Nebraska history to win both the high school and the college honors.

In 1962 he secured a position as a graduate assistant on Bob Devaney's Husker staff. He served in that capacity until he obtained his master's degree in 1963. Continuing his dual role in education and football coaching, Osborne gained his doctorate in 1965 and, holding the academic rank of instructor of educational psychology at Teachers College, was a part-time coach.

Osborne, born Feb. 23, 1937, elected to pursue coaching full-time in 1967 and became the Huskers' receivers coach, a decision that NU fans have applauded since.

Married to the former Nancy Tederman, Osborne is the father of a son, Mike, and two daughters, Ann and Susie. Mike followed in his father's footsteps by playing football at Hastings College, where he was a quarterback. He is now a graduate student. □

University of Nebraska: Innovation and Excellence for America's Future

Two years after acquiring statehood, Nebraska founded the University of Nebraska in Lincoln as both its land-grant institution and its state university. Since 1869 the University of Nebraska-Lincoln (UNL) has been a catalyst in Nebraska's development as an imaginative, industrious and ingenious state.

Today the partnership between Nebraska and its university is taking on new dimensions. UNL has redefined and expanded its traditional land-grant role to reflect Nebraska's need for new knowledge in a wide spectrum of rapidly advancing scientific, technological, agricultural and business-related areas.

As Nebraska's major research and most comprehensive undergraduate university, UNL serves as the primary source of new knowledge in the academic disciplines and provides education of the highest quality for future scientists and engineers, as well as for students in the liberal arts and professions. UNL researchers have achieved national stature for doing work in the fields of electro-optical measurements, mass spectrometry, biotechnology, biochemistry, climatology, atomic and solid-state physics, materials science, water quality, agricultural marketing and economics, communication disorders, computer science, political analysis, history and English, among others.

To meet the demands of scholarship and service, UNL has taken an interdisciplinary approach to complex research problems. In recent years the University has established research centers in the areas of productivity and entrepreneurship, franchise studies, engine technology, electro-optical measurements, biotechnology and biochemistry, food processing technology, Great Plains studies and agricultural product development, marketing and utilization.

Informational support for university teaching and research includes a library system with more than two million volumes, an on-campus network of main-frame and personal computers, and participation in MIDNET, a vital link to the National Science Foundation's supercomputer network.

UNL's 1,100-member faculty is one of Nebraska's most vital resources. Nationally respected for their expertise and scholarship, UNL faculty bring to the classroom a commitment to providing the University's 25,000 undergraduate and graduate students with the intellectual skills and the breadth of knowledge they will require as community and professional leaders in this era of accelerated technological and social change.

As a result of a two-year study, UNL has initiated the Program for the Advancement of General Education. Undergraduate programs are being strengthened as curricula are refined to provide a common learning experience for UNL's students. Substantial attention is being focused on the development of skills that a citizen of

If you think the best way to pay for college is to put it off for a few years and join the military, you're half right.

Because with the New GI Bill, you can join the Army National Guard and earn over $15,000 for college.

But best of all, you serve part-time, as little as two days a month and two weeks a year. Which means you can go to school full-time. Right now. On us.

So the question you have to ask yourself is not, can you afford to go to college.

The question is, can you afford to wait.

the 21st century will require: the ability to communicate verbally and in writing, mathematical competency, computer literacy, facility with languages other than English, sound reasoning capabilities, and the ability to make decisions that are both knowledge- and value-based.

More than 150,000 alumni worldwide have graduated from UNL to become leaders in business, industry, education and the professions.

Over the years alumni such as authors Willa Cather and Mari Sandoz, legal educator Roscoe Pound, anthropologist and author Loren Eiseley, and scientists such as Nobel Prize-winning chemists George Beadle and Donald Cram, inventor Harold "Doc" Edgerton and computer pioneer Jay Forrester have enriched the University's tradition of leadership and scholarly excellence.

Quality instruction is emphasized in UNL's eight undergraduate colleges, in the Graduate School and in the professional graduate College of Law. The Colleges of Agriculture, Architecture, Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, Engineering and Technology, Home Economics and Journalism and the Teachers College offer more than 130 degree programs leading to career opportunities in the arts, the sciences, the humanities and the professions.

UNL receives more than $30 million annually in grants and contracts from outside sources for research, instruction, public service, administration and student aid.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln reaches thousands of citizens each year through programs conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service and the Division of Continuing Studies. The Cooperative Extension Service provides all Nebraskans with information and assistance in agricultural and natural resources, home economics, family living, 4-H and youth development and community resource development. The Continuing Studies program offers an alternative to formal on-campus education with programs such as summer reading courses, evening classes, independent study by correspondence, telecourses and study tours.

The Lincoln campus is home to the nationally renowned Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery and Sculpture Garden, the University of Nebraska State Museum, the Christlieb Collection of Western Art and the University's championship Big Eight Conference men's and women's athletic teams.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln is an imaginative leader in American education, setting ever higher standards for degrees of excellence. □

WHERE YOU MAKE THE CALLS

by Scott Van Camp

Many people have the false assumption that football season begins in the fall.

Actually, for many fans, the season began Christmas morning when, as wide-eyed kids, they opened a huge, rectangular package and set up the "realistic" football game. And it was real—a marked field, goal posts, little plastic players that were painted (if Dad bought the deluxe model), a scoreboard and even bleachers you set up on the sidelines.

After carefully lining up the offense and defense, placing the tiny felt football in the runner's arms and finding an electrical outlet that worked, it was time for play to begin.

"Hummmmmmm." Ah, the sound of Electric Football. Those plastic players bouncing up and down on that vibrating metal field. Indeed, it was a sound like none other.

"Hummmmmmm." Look at that runner go! What moves!

After the play was over, it didn't matter if your Jim Brown and half of his blockers just ran (vibrated) 15 yards backward—you were playing football.

And if any team were ever lucky enough to score, you could even kick a PAT. It's just that the chances of ever making one were about one in 100. But it was football.

The game of football has come a long way since its inception and so have the football games that are played by kids (and kids at heart).

With the advent of the computer chip, "realistic" football is no longer just a sales pitch. And for the board game purist, the final score is no longer determined just by a roll of the dice; modern games have introduced the ingredients of skill, knowledge and experience.

On the real gridiron, players have become bigger, stronger and faster. The same can now be said for the games played in the home. Oh, Electric Football is still shaking up the game market, as it has for over 35 years. But now there is more of a selection of football games to choose from.

Here are some of the different types of football games available on the market:

Board Games—For more gridiron realism, like players moving up and down the field or sound effects, look elsewhere. The football board game is for the purist—a serious football fan who is hooked on player statistics and coaching strategy.

The Avalon Hill Game Co. markets four football-related board games, among hundreds of others. There are two goals that a good game must have, said Tom Shaw, the company's vice president.

"It has to be a real-life situation, to give the player a vicarious experience," he said. "And the game has to have some decision-making."

In early versions, football board games did not involve many decisions, just a roll of the dice. Now they are a statistician's dream, because of the computer. It's ironic that the natural enemy of the board game would become the key in its resurgence. But the computer has brought up-to-date statistics into the games.

"We now have greater stat accuracy, and information is more available, thanks to computers," Shaw said.

An example is Avalon Hill's most popular football game, Statist Pro Football. Every NFL player from last season is evaluated in several statistical areas, and that information is put on a single card. That way, the best players in the league can be matched up against one another. The cards are updated every year and sold separately from the game, making it less expensive to play from season to season.

While Shaw said that the individual player concept is the most popular, the company also sells games that use "team charts." Bowl Bound features 32 of the best college teams, while Paydirt charts the 28 pro teams.

Another popular board game is Strat-O-Matic Pro Football manufactured by the Strat-O-Matic Game Co. for about the past 20 years. This game uses a combination of team and individual cards which, according to company president Hal Richmond, makes the game one of a kind. "You can actually set players in different positions on the board, so you can see the action unfold," Richmond said. Two years ago the company introduced College Football, which showcases 48 popular college teams. There is plenty of opportunity to coach in Strat-O-Matic games. As a defensive coordinator, the player has to be aware of past offensive tendencies, as well as strengths and weaknesses. You can switch from a 4-3 defense to a 3-4, blitz on passing situations and key on certain offensive players.

Other board games available include Pro League Football by APBA Game Co., NFL Fever by JN Hansen, Cadaco's All-American Football and NFL Strategy by Tudor.

Home Entertainment Systems—These are computer games without the computer. A home entertainment system does two things:

- It enables one to play games—with excellent sound and graphics—through the television set.
- It drives parents crazy.

There are three major systems on the market, made by Nintendo, Sega and Atari. Each offers a wide selection of game cartridges, from classic arcade games like Donkey Kong (Nintendo) to sports games such as golf, hockey, baseball and football. Game cartridges are also supplied by independent companies, so there are always more than enough games to keep the kids from doing their homework.

The factors that set these games apart from the board games are the visual and sound effects. Players really look like players (well, kind of) and can be controlled by a joystick. When they run out onto the screen, the crowd cheers and the referee blows the whistle. Most of the games feature two-person play or solitaire play versus the computer.

Sega's game, Great Football, lets "YOU call the plays and carry the ball." Atari puts out a cartridge with the streamlined title, Football, while Nintendo's game is called 10-Yard Fight.

One advantage to these games is that you don't need a bona fide computer to play computer games. So if you're interested in becoming a games junkie without having to worry about bits and bytes, an entertainment system might be a good alternative.

Computer Games—You would think that any market that offers a Chernobyl Nuclear Plant simulation game could come up with a great game of football. And it does. Games that run on computers, like Apple, IBM, Commodore, etc., have powerful sound and graphics, and with more memory capabilities statistics from past games can be stored.

Take Avalon Hill's game for the popular Apple Macintosh, Mac Pro Football. Here's what it can do:

- Set the weather conditions, which do affect the outcome of the game.
- Create the coin toss.
- Offer a scouting report that rates the players of each of the 40 championship teams in the program.
- Offer three coaching levels.
- At the championship level, 10 defensive decisions can be made, while on offense, nine are up to the player.
- A player can run precise pass patterns, including up-field and lateral moves.

If you're into the X's and O's, Mac Pro Football is a game you'd enjoy, because X's and O's are displayed on the screen.

Avalon Hill's other football computer game, Super Sunday, features full-screen, color re-enactments of all 20 Super Bowl teams. Super Sunday is available for Commodore, Apple and IBM computers.

If exciting simulation is what you want, Activision's GFL Championship Football could fit the bill. It features "in helmet perspective," so a player can run with the ball and actually see the big linebacker running up to make the tackle. GFL is made for the Commodore.

* * * *

And there are plenty of other games to play. Don't forget about roisserie leagues, in which your house mortgage hinges on the performance of your favorite college or pro players. And there's a school cafeteria favorite, played with a piece of paper folded into a triangle. Players take positions at each end of a flat table and take turns flicking the triangle toward the end zone (the edge of the table). If a corner of the "football" goes over the edge without it falling off, it's a touchdown.

Of course, there's nothing better than the real thing, but plenty of football fans spend their free time playing the game at home. According to Tom Shaw, the VCR posed the main threat to the game market, as more people began to watch movies instead of buying games. But the drop-off in sales was not as bad as expected; in fact, sales are now better than ever. "We might have sold even more [games], if not for the VCR," Shaw said.

Many of these games mentioned are so popular that players have formed their own leagues—and while competition is friendly, it is still fierce.

Stratomatic's Richmond told the story of the guy who was in a 28-team league in Edmonton, Alberta. The league has social events and even a newsletter, Red Dog Alert.

"Unfortunately, he had to move 350 miles away," Richmond said, "but that didn't keep him from making the 700-mile round trip once every two weeks to play double-header games."

So which game is right for you? For some, it may not be the most realistic games that are the most fun. Scott Marley, games and books editor at Games magazine, has helped review hundreds of games.

"If I'm playing a sports game, realism makes a difference," he said, "but it's important that the game is interesting as a game."

Maybe you would just like to watch plastic figures vibrate down the Electric Football field, or you might opt for the "in-helmet perspective." Or something in between.

Whatever your choice, playing football games is a great way to enjoy the sport and still be in one piece when the final buzz, bleep or boing is sounded. □

YEARS FROM NOW YOU MAY HAVE TO REPLACE THE LACES.

Timberlands just seem to get better with age. You see, what makes them wear well is what makes them look good.

We handsew them because no machine can do the job. We make the sides and bottom from one piece of hide to cradle your foot and add a glove soft leather lining to gently coddle it as well.

As time goes by you'll notice that the solid brass eyelets are still in place, and still shining. The leather uppers will certainly have earned some memorable nicks and scars, but the nylon hand stitching will still hold. As will the rawhide laces.

And if some day years from now you have to replace a lace, we hope you won't feel that the new one harms your Timberlands' appearance.

TIPS ON SHOOTING SPORTS

In all photography, light is the basic element with which you work. It determines what film you use, what apertures and shutter speeds you choose...even the lens you select. Proper lighting can make a common subject great; bad lighting can ruin the best sports shot.

Films are rated according to their sensitivity to light. Somewhere on the film canister, you'll see the letters ISO and a number from, say, 25 to 1000. That number is the film speed, and the higher it is, the more sensitive the film is to light. Generally, fast or highly sensitive filmstocks are also more grainy than their slower, less sensitive brothers. This characteristic can be used for artistic ends, but most photographers like the finer resolution of slower films.

Choosing the right filmstock depends on a number of variables. If you're shooting dune buggies at noon on the Mohave desert, an ISO 25 or 64 film will do just fine. In fact, you might have trouble using an ISO 160 or 400 film: it might be too sensitive to light, forcing you to use very small apertures or very high shutter speeds. If you're going to be shooting a football game on a dull grey afternoon in December, though, you'll need all the speed you can get, especially if you want to use the faster shutter speeds to freeze action.

If you're shooting black and white film, you've got a good deal of flexibility. B&W has a great deal of latitude: you can be off as much as two f-stops from the correct exposure and still get a decent negative. Color films, both negative and slide, unfortunately have less latitude. If you're off by more than about one-half of an f-stop, you'll begin to see a color shift.

B&W has another advantage, too. The film can be "forced," or exposed as if it had an ISO rating of two or three times its actual number. Your photo lab can compensate for the forced underexposure by "push processing," or extending the developing time. (Among the color films, Kodak's Ektachrome slide film can be forced and push processed.) If the sun hides behind the clouds and you decide to force a film, remember to expose the entire roll at the forced ISO number. Since the compensation is done in the developing process, you can't correct partially forced rolls of film!

What do you do if you load a film that's too sensitive for the light conditions? The best answer is to use an inexpensive accessory called a "neutral density" filter, which mounts in front of your lens and reduces the amount of light passing through to the film. ND filters are available in strengths that reduce exposure by one to three f-stops.

While B&W film is versatile, most photographers prefer to shoot color. Color negative films, which produce prints, are available in speeds up to ISO 1000, and many have a latitude of one f-stop with acceptable results. Color positive film, used to make slides, has less latitude, but there's one filmstock—Kodak's P800/1600—that's designed to be forced and push processed. You can actually shoot this film at ISO 3200!

Sooner or later, though, you're going to be shooting indoors. If you supplement inadequate indoor lighting with electronic flash, make sure that you choose a color film that's balanced for daylight. (If you use daylight film under tungsten lights indoors, you'll notice a decided shift toward the red in all the colors.) Use a tungsten-balanced film for correct color values when shooting indoors. Fluorescent lighting is something of a problem, but using daylight film with an FL-D filter provides a pretty good answer.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL LEGENDS

CHUCK BEDNARIK

by Nick Peters,
The Sacramento (Calif.) Bee

Tempered by life near the steel mills and toughened by 30 combat missions over Germany as a World War II aerial gunner, Charles Bednarik was hardly a typical college freshman when he enrolled at the University of Pennsylvania in the autumn of 1945.

Then 20 and a grizzled veteran of battle, Bednarik seemed grotesquely out of place at a school whose athletic nickname was the Quakers. Three years later, he'd won the prestigious Maxwell Award and was runner-up to Doak Walker in the race for the Heisman Trophy.

Bednarik was a consensus All-America in 1947 and 1948, making 17 All-America squads.

The All-American Board of Football selected him as the center on its 25-year All-American Team. He was elected to the National Football Hall of Fame in 1969, and following a brilliant NFL career with the Philadelphia Eagles, 1949-62, he was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1967.

When Chuck Bednarik was with the Eagles, he was known as "Concrete Charlie" only partially because he worked as a salesman for a ready-mix concrete company. The moniker was also a reference to the remarkable stamina that made him the gridiron version of baseball's Lou Gehrig.

As football's last great ironman, Bednarik was a two-way player of extraordinary skill at center and linebacker, frequently playing nearly 60 minutes a game. Some regard him as the greatest center in the history of the sport, yet football was the furthest thing from his mind when Chuck graduated from Bethlehem High in 1943.

"I couldn't wait to turn 18, so I could enlist and join so many of my friends in the service," recalled Bednarik, 63, now a corrugated box salesman and a fanatic golfer and accordion player in his beloved Pennsylvania. "Sports were a big part of our lives then, but we all wanted to do what we had to do for our country."

"It wasn't easy. I was in the service for 27 months. Just going up in one of those B-24s full of bombs was bad enough. There was lots of flak from German gunners and we were always flying in bad weather. We were based in England, taking off from Rackheath AFB in Norwich. I was six-foot and 180 pounds when I enlisted, and 6-2, 220 when I got out."

Unlike many athletes who spent the war playing ball or training servicemen, Bednarik was in the thick of combat. He came close to playing service football once, yet wasn't considered good enough to make the team. It turned out to be a blessing in disguise because that failure earned him an earlier start on a great college career.

"Toward the end of my tour of duty, I was sent to Santa Ana [Calif.] for some rest and recreation," he said. "The captain took one look at me and asked if I was interested in playing football. I was sent to Greensboro [N.C.] to play, but when I got there the squad was full of pros."

"The coach never gave me a look, so I was classified as a P.E. instructor. Then the atom bomb was dropped and I got an early discharge. The guys on that service team didn't get out till the end of November. By then, I was already playing for Penn."

(13-0), Army (26-20) and Cornell (23-14).

When memories of his college career were rekindled, Chuck fondly told of a 26-20 victory over archrival Cornell that concluded his sophomore season and a loss to Army by the same score his senior year.

"The one I remember most was that Army game," he said. "Colonel Earl Blaik was their coach and Sid Gillman was an assistant. They were a power and we were a 20-point underdog. We were ahead late in the game, 20-19, but Arnie Galiffa threw a touchdown pass to beat us.

"The best college game I ever played probably was against Cornell in 1946. They were one of the top teams in the country in those years and a big Ivy League rival. There were about 35,000 at Franklin Field and it was a very emotional game.

"We went ahead, 26-6, and it looked like a rout," Bednarik continued. "But they came back to make it 26-20 and were on our seven-yard line in a fourth-and-three situation. I made the tackle that saved the game, and it was a great feeling because of what the game meant to people.

"You have to remember that Penn football was really big in those days. We were unquestionably the No. 1 team in the state. Now Penn State has that distinction, and you'd think they were the only team in the world, the way they act. You know, I kind of like to see them get beat."

A fierce competitor to this day, Bednarik relishes the memories of working nearly every down. He was a hard-nosed athlete who played with relentless energy and stamina. When he wasn't snapping the ball or linebacking, he was kicking off and booting extra points and field goals.

"I enjoyed playing defense the most," Bednarik noted. "We played a 6-2-2-1, and I was the linebacker on the right side because the fullback lined up on the left side. If I were playing today, I'd be a linebacker. That's the glamor position on defense. They make three times as much as the centers.

"I got my share of publicity in college, and I earned it. I worked hard in practice, and I played 58 1/2 minutes a game. I just didn't want to come out of the game. My substitute didn't play much. But it wasn't such a big deal at the time because a lot of guys did it in single-platoon football."

Bednarik's ironman feats became more widely heralded in his later years with the Eagles. He was the last outstanding two-way performer. At age 35, in 1960, he went 58 1/2 minutes against Green Bay, 57 against New York and 56 against Cleveland. It's no coincidence that the two players he most respected were fellow ironmen Leo Nomellini and Ernie Stautner.

Bednarik was discharged Oct. 11, 1945, long after the football season had begun. He went home to Bethlehem and paid a visit to his old high school football coach, John Butler. Chuck expressed an interest in going to college on the G.I. Bill, so he was pointed toward the prestigious Penn football program under acclaimed coach George Munger.

"It felt strange walking out onto the football field the first time," Bednarik conceded. "All I saw were kids 17 and 18, and they were the football team. I arrived about the first of November and beat out the center, who was the captain of the team."

Bednarik made his collegiate debut in a 32-7 Ivy League romp over Columbia prior to a rude awakening the following week against powerhouse Army and its famed touchdown twins, Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard. The Cadets crushed the Quakers, 61-0. "I was in awe . . . there were 78,800 people at Franklin Field," he said.

That was the worst defeat Bednarik suffered as a collegian. Once he joined the squad, Penn went 20-6-1 in three-plus seasons. The Quakers were 6-2 in 1946, 7-0-1 in 1947 (only a 7-7 tie with Army marring the season) and 5-0 in 1948 prior to three season-ending defeats against Penn State

The work ethic didn't come by accident. Growing up in a steel town, Chuck saw nothing but hard work in the Depression. His parents were immigrants from the Czechoslovakian village of Siroke, near Bratislava and about 40 miles north of Vienna. His father worked in the open hearth of the steel mill, where it was 200 degrees. He was paid $2,300 a year, supplementing his income by felling trees with the help of his son.

"I was a natural athlete and high school sports were an outlet because there wasn't much else to do but work in the steel towns," Bednarik said. "I played three

'He was a hard-nosed athlete who played with relentless energy and stamina. When he wasn't snapping the ball or linebacking, he was kicking off and booting extra points and field goals.'

sports. Besides football, I played basketball and was the catcher on the baseball team.

"I was a fifth-string fullback, weighing 160 pounds, as a high school sophomore. I became a center/linebacker after that pretty much because the all-state center on our team was injured one week before the opener and the coach told me I was the center.

"I felt invincible as an athlete," he added. "Lehigh Academy was in town, too, but it was known for academics. High school sports were bigger. We drew 18,000 for our traditional football rivalry with neighboring Allentown High. I loved sports, but I also knew the value of an education."

Not particularly enamored with the prospect of spending his adulthood in a steel mill, Bednarik made education a priority when he enrolled at Penn. He didn't give much thought to a professional football career and worked toward a degree in education, which he obtained in June of 1949. By then he was the No. 1 draft choice of the NFL champion Eagles.

"I totally expected to become a teacher and a coach," Bednarik said. "Pro football wasn't what it is now. It was in its adolescence. I'd heard of guys like Steve Van Buren and Sammy Baugh, but college football was king in those days.

"Penn was among the top-ranked teams and drawing big crowds, so I was in awe of college ball. The pros were the furthest thing from my mind, and it wasn't because I underestimated my ability. I knew I was a good athlete. I had success at everything I played.

"What changed my mind was being drafted No. 1," he noted. "The Eagles offered me a $3,000 cash bonus, which was big money in those days, and a $10,000 contract. Teachers were making $2,700 a year, so I wasn't stupid enough to turn down that money."

Bednarik concentrated on football in college because Munger emphasized not being spread too thin since academics were so important. Chuck lettered one year in baseball before dropping that sport. Had he elected to continue, he might have attained greatness. In 1946 he set a world record by throwing a baseball 403 feet.

To this day, Bednarik is still a successful competitor. Golf is his passion, and he recently defeated the 1976 club champion at Whitemarsh in a round of golf. But his latest love is the accordion, so Chuck plunked $6,000 down for a snazzy Italian instrument and is practicing diligently.

What else would you expect from an ironman? ☐

A SALUTE TO HUSKER ACADEMIC-ATHLETIC LEADERS

Mark Blazek

Jeff Jamrog

Virginia Stahr

Stephanie Bolli

Tom Schlesinger

Lori Sippel

Academics are an important part of the student-athlete's career at Nebraska. The Huskers have led the Big Eight in academic honors for athletes for many years and this year is no exception. Over 100 Husker athletes were named to the Big Eight Honor Roll in 1987-88. To qualify, each letterperson must have posted a 3.0 grade point average during the 1987-88 year. Of 521 athletes, Nebraska led the Big Eight with 120 named to the honor roll, followed by Iowa State (83), Missouri (67), Colorado (60), Kansas (56), Oklahoma State (54), Oklahoma (43) and Kansas State (38). Of Nebraska's honorees, 21 were football players.

To qualify for first-team Academic All-Big Eight honors, a player must be a starter or an important reserve and post a 2.8 GPA. Eight football players earned first-team honors, and 34 other Huskers from 17 sports also proved that academics and athletics can go hand in hand.

The next step up is to be named to the GTE Academic All-America team, where student-athletes across the nation compete for honors. To qualify, athletes must be a leading contributor to the team and post a 3.20 cumulative GPA. Nebraska saw six athletes earn such honors: Mark Blazek and Jeff Jamrog from football; volleyball player Virginia Stahr; Stephanie Bolli from the Husker women's basketball team; gymnast Tom Schlesinger; and softball All-American Lori Sippel. In addition Schlesinger and Sippel were named Nebraska's Conference Medal Award winners for the 1987-88 academic year as seniors who have had an outstanding record in athletics and academics.

The University of Nebraska salutes these athletes who have found success both in the classroom and in athletics.

Drugs and the Athlete... a losing combination.

Athletes command a unique position in American society and in societies throughout the world. Many view the athlete as a hero who strives for perfection. The public expects excellence, and to achieve these high standards and thereby maintain public favor, the athlete must maintain peak alertness, responsiveness, efficiency and coordination.

A small segment of the athlete population has resorted to the use of drugs (e.g., anabolic steroids, amphetamines and various "street drugs") purported to improve physical performance. The decision to use drugs to improve physical performance, for the most part, has not been based on sound information and could have dire physical consequences for involved individuals. Further, such usage violates NCAA ethical principles.

The ethics of sport need to be emphasized, particularly in that taking drugs to improve performance constitutes cheating. There is need to reemphasize the fact that the important thing in sport is to compete honorably; to win at all costs is a contradiction to the meaning of sport.

The athlete should not carry all the blame for the situation. Coaches, trainers and the medical profession need to share some of this burden, as does the public, for expecting and frequently demanding a winning effort every time.

Society has placed a number of demands upon the athlete. If one believes that athletes and the general public will make sound judgments most of the time when provided with the necessary information, educating athletes and others about drug effects, appropriate drug use and the skills needed to cope with such problems could have substantial benefits to the individual and to society.

The NCAA has produced a pamphlet entitled "Drugs and the Athlete...a losing combination," which includes the latest and best information available on the problem of solving drugs in sports. To order, send $3 for 12 copies to: NCAA Publishing, P.O. Box 1906, Mission, Kansas 66201.

MEN'S SWIMMING

Head Coach: Cal Bentz
Career Record: 86-50, 13 years
Diving Coach: Jeff Huber
Assistant Coaches: Rick Paine, Keith Moore
1987-88 Record: 8-1
Conference Finish: 1st

Quickfact: The Huskers have won nine-straight conference titles and their 10th-place finish at the 1988 NCAA Championships was the best in school history.

The 1987-88 season was unquestionably the most successful in school history. A near-perfect dual season, a ninth-straight Big Eight title and their first Top 10 finish saw the Nebraska men's swim team get a foot in the door with the national elite.

It would be hard to blame head coach Cal Bentz and his Huskers for being greedy. While some teams may be content with taking success one step at a time, Bentz has his team looking to seize the opportunity in order to swim with the best.

"We were very pleased with last season," he said. "To finish in the Top 10 was a great accomplishment for this team but we feel with the talent and experience we have returning, now is the time for us to move even higher."

To do that, Bentz has assembled some of the nation's best swimmers in the Cornhusker camp as they look to challenge the traditional powers again this season.

Leading the way for the Nebraska swimmers are sophomore Peter Williams, the world record holder in the 50-meter freestyle, and senior Mike Irvin, a three-time All-American in the individual medley. All-American divers Lewis Meyers and Lawrence Roddick, a U.S. National Team member, provide coach Jeff Huber and the Huskers with one of the most talented duos in the country. In all, the Huskers return 12 athletes with NCAA meet experience and honors to the 1988-89 edition.

The Huskers will have a chance to showcase their talent at home when they host one of the most unique meets ever held in the United States, Dec. 1. Prior to the Husker Invitational, five of the nation's Top 10 teams from a year ago will battle in a meet featuring sprint races only. Included in the field are Nebraska, UCLA, Michigan, Southern Methodist and defending national champion Texas.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Head Coach: Ray Huppert
Career Record: 84-40, 13 years
Assistant Coach: Kelly Nordell
1987-88 Record: 7-2
Conference Finish: 2nd

Quickfact: The Huskers have won eight-straight dual meets at the Bob Devaney Sports Center.

After losing their hold on the Big Eight championship last season, it may seem as though the Nebraska women's swim team has backed itself into a corner. In recent years, the Huskers have enjoyed conference supremacy and national respect with three Big Eight titles and Top 20 rankings.

Last year, however, not only did Kansas take home the conference title, the Huskers finished a dismal 39th at the NCAA Championships.

For head coach Ray Huppert and his team, it's time to come out a-fightin'. And that, he says, is what they intend to do.

"This is an important year for us," Huppert said. "We have to go out and prove to everybody and to ourselves that we are a much better team than we showed at the end of last season."

In all fairness, the Huskers have sported one of the youngest teams in the nation the past two seasons and last year saw injuries slow the lineup second semester. Now as he looks at the 1988-89 season, Huppert is as optimistic as ever about avoiding a repeat and bringing Nebraska back into national prominence.

"I really think that this year's team has as much talent as any team that we've ever had at Nebraska," he said. "We have people who have been in the program and have gotten a tremendous amount of experience. Now they are showing the desire and determination to become even better both individually and as a team."

Among the athletes returning this season include Big Eight champions Carole Johnson, Terri Long, Mindy Matheny and diver Julie May.

Husker Volleyball . . .

The Hit of the 80's

by Terry Beek

- 74 consecutive weeks ranked in the AVCA top-20
- 65 weeks ranked in the top-10
- 23 All-Big Eight honorees
- 12 consecutive Big Eight Conference Championships
- 12 consecutive seasons with 27-or-more wins
- 10 consecutive top-20 national finishes
- Nine All-Americans
- Six consecutive top-10 national finishes
- Six consecutive NCAA tournament berths
- Six consecutive Big Eight tournament MVP honorees
- Four top-5 national finishes
- Two Big Eight Player of the Year awards

The list of accomplishments is almost endless for the Nebraska volleyball program.

The main reason, the driving force behind the success of Husker volleyball is head coach Terry Pettit. Pettit is in his 12th season at the helm of the program and has directed his team to a 361-96 record and a .790 winning percentage.

He has earned the respect of his colleagues, has been honored with the Big Eight Coach of the Year awards in three-consecutive years and was the American Volleyball Coaches Association's National Coach of the Year in 1986.

Terry Pettit discusses strategy with former Husker Kathi DeBoer-Weiskamp during NCAA tournament.

Year after year, Nebraska has been consistent, producing nine All-America and 25 All-Big Eight selections (six first-team) in the last five seasons. Pettit explains why. "If Lori Endicott is a great setter, one of the reasons is because she had the opportunity to watch Tisha Delaney, who had the opportunity to watch Cathy Noth, who had the opportunity to watch Mary Buysse. We try to stress that at Nebraska you are part of a tradition and you have to work hard to maintain that."

The 1988 team seems to fall right into line with that tradition and doesn't seem to offer any relief for Husker opponents. In the early stages of this season, the six-ranked, 8-2 Huskers are well on their way to another banner year. Nebraska ranks second nationally with 17.6 kills per game, eighth with 14.0 assists and 3.54 blocks per game and 16th with a .301 hitting percentage.

Five starters returned from last season's 30-5 squad, led by senior All-America setter Lori Endicott. Endicott, the 1987 Big Eight Conference Player of the Year, has already earned two tournament MVP honors and leads the Big Eight and is seventh nationally, with 12.6 set assists per game.

Junior All-America candidate Virginia Stahr, who finished last year with the third-best hitting percentage in the nation at .397, is already equalling last season's accomplishment. In 10 matches this year she is hitting .391, averaging 4.2 kills and 1.5 blocks per game.

Rounding out the top Husker performers this season are Carla Baker and Val Novak. Baker, a 6-2 junior middle blocker, is averaging 2.2 kills and 1.3 blocks while hitting .325. Novak, a 5-10 sophomore, is averaging 3.5 kills and has a .326 hitting percentage.

The Huskers open their defense of the Big Eight Championship tonight against Oklahoma in Norman. Nebraska will host Kansas State in its conference home opener, Wednesday, Oct. 5, and then host Colorado, Saturday, Oct. 8. Both matches will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the newly renovated Nebraska Coliseum.

"I found a way to get better performance."

When I drive, I want my car to perform. That's why I fill it with Super Unleaded with Ethanol.

The higher octane gives me better starts and quicker acceleration. No knocks. No pings. Just flat-out performance.

Driving is just no fun if your car doesn't run right. A tankful of Super Unleaded with Ethanol makes an engine purr. And helps my car perform.

Maybe it's time you had one for your telecommunications system.

Imagine what it would look like if a football team decided to "wing it" out there on the field without a game plan. It would look pretty silly, wouldn't it?

Well, that's exactly what many companies do when it comes to planning and designing telecommunications systems. The results are costly.

That's where we come in to play. You see, we can show you the most cost effective way to handle your information. No matter how unusual your needs are. In fact, we're the telecommunications consultant to the Super Bowl and a number of NFL teams. We provide dozens of communication systems that enable the press to get their stories out, spotters to talk with their coaches, and stadium security to talk to each other.

If we can do all that, just think of what we can do for you.

Isn't it time you had a game plan for your telecommunications system? Get in touch with us. Your GTE Account Manager will be glad to help you draw one up.

Homecoming '88

The traditional UNL Homecoming has taken on a new dimension this year, tying it to the statewide 'Celebrate Nebraska '88' focus.

'Celebrate Nebraska '88' is a year-long series of events recognizing both Nebraska's heritage and future. UNL has joined in the celebration, and has planned a full schedule of activities for Homecoming weekend that combine the traditional with the new.

Three goals of the statewide celebration are to renew a strong sense of state and community pride; to increase tourism revenues, and to build an awareness of Nebraska's positive business climate.

A major goal of the 'Celebrate UNL' focus during Homecoming is to highlight the great resources which the University brings to the citizens of the state.

Activities scheduled for Friday, Oct. 14, and Saturday, Oct. 15, include 27 faculty presentations on topics as diverse as "Steers, Steaks and Designer Franks" to "A Return to Eloquence in Public Speaking." Four faculty presentations will be held each hour, from 2 to 4:15 p.m. on Friday, and 9 to 11:15 a.m. on Saturday.

Other activities for the two days include alumni dinners, special exhibits and open houses at various locations on City Campus; 28 department or college exhibits at Devaney Sports Center, and 12 exhibits at the Military and Naval Science Building.

The 'Celebrate Nebraska/Celebrate UNL' festivities begin Monday, Oct. 10, with a wide variety of student Homecoming activities.

Comin' at 'ya—potpourri of activities

"Celebrate Nebraska—Celebrate UNL" events will be a mix of traditional homecoming activities with many new activities that will keep comin' at 'ya from noon Friday to well after the final whistle in the Cornhusker's Oct. 15 game vs. Oklahoma State.

As usual, there will be many colorful displays produced by campus living units, and a Homecoming Parade.

From there students and the general public are invited to the Bob Devaney Sports Center for a spectacular party that will begin at approximately 7:15 a.m. and won't be over until after the Cornhusker varsity basketball team concludes its first practice of the season.

That's right—This year's Homecoming celebration will even encompass basketball. The varsity team takes to the arena floor for its first practice (open to the public) at 12:01 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 15. The practice will be preceded at 9:30 p.m. by an alumni basketball game.

Other events to take place Friday night at the Sports Center will include a carnival, which will run from 2-11 p.m. Friday, gymnastics and swimming and diving exhibitions at 8 p.m., and a performance by the UNL Men's Glee Club at 8:45 p.m. Academic areas of the University will also present exhibits on the concourse level of the Sports Center from 7-15-11 p.m.

Highlights of "Celebrate UNL" on Saturday will include 12 exhibits by academic areas in UNL's Military and Naval Science Building at 12th and Vine St., just east of the Coliseum. Also at the same site, there will be performances by the UNL Pep Band and UNL's Scarlet and Cream Singers. The Military Science Building program will be held from 9 a.m. to Noon Saturday. Activities will also include continuation of open houses in various academic buildings that begin Friday afternoon, lectures by UNL faculty members, and a pep rally.

Homecoming Royalty, to be chosen in a campus-wide election Wednesday, will be crowned at half-time of the football game, and after the game sports fans are invited to see UNL's volleyball team compete against the Oklahoma Sooners at 5 p.m. in the Coliseum.

The UNL Alumni Association will host a Postgame Party open to one and all at the Cornhusker Hotel that will begin at 5 p.m.

So many choices which one will it be?

IMPOSSIBLE! It can't be done. There is absolutely no way any individual can participate in each and every one of the activities planned for "Celebrate UNL"—the University of Nebraska—Lincoln's Homecoming Celebration that will be the biggest, most spectacular, and the liveliest Homecoming ever at the University.

Of course, there's the football game, and a pep rally, and a Homecoming Dance, a Homecoming Royalty contest, a display contest and a parade. That's traditional.

But also included in this year's fare will be a carnival at the Bob Devaney Sports Center, a laser show in the planetarium, a play in Howell Theatre, a jazz concert in Kimball Recital Hall, college displays in the Military Science Building, a print sale in the Nebraska Union, an alumni basketball game, a midnight practice for the varsity basketball team—and perhaps most ambitious of all—a lecture program featuring more than 25 outstanding faculty members.

So many sparkling lectures, many of them to be given simultaneously, is one reason it will be impossible to enjoy the full range of activities planned for this year's Homecoming Celebration. The lectures begin at 2 p.m. Friday and another round will be held Saturday.

Lectures at 2 p.m. Friday and their locations:

Dale Gibbs, architecture, "Dream Houses," Sheldon Gallery auditorium.

Davis Clements, chemical engineering, "Don't Cut Back,—Step Out in New Directions," Wick Alumni Center.

A 2:30 p.m. lecture by Terry Rioridan, horticulture, "New Developments in Turfgrass Breeding," will be given in Westbrook Music Building auditorium (Room 119).

John Janovy, biological sciences, "Why Faculty Research is important to Freshman Students," Sheldon auditorium.

You Make The Call.

O.K. Here's the situation: Early in the fourth quarter, with Nebraska up by three touchdowns and looking like a Red Steamroller, a fan stands up from his assigned seat. He decides to get a jump on the crowd and leaves the game to go to Tony & Luigi's. Did he make the right decision?

Now you make the call!

The answer after this logo.

The Big Tomato Rule Book states that "it is acceptable fan behavior to leave a lopsided game early only for a unique dining experience." If you said "yes," you made the right call!

Some fans go to great lengths to see the Huskers.

Some Nebraska football fans drive the length of the state to watch the Huskers play. When they come, they're probably listening to KRVN Radio.

They listen to KRVN for up-to-the-minute news and farm reports, weather and road conditions and easy listening country music. On those game days when they can't make the game, they listen to it on KRVN.

KRVN—the station for Husker fans on the move.

To be your best in Nebraska you've got to know the turf.

That's especially true in banking. That's why First Commerce Bancshares takes such pride in the deep roots it has across Nebraska. Each First Commerce Company is locally directed and managed by people who know the needs of the area they serve. Yet each company can draw on the strength and resources of one of Nebraska's strongest financial organizations.

Together the men and women at First Commerce Bancshares are dedicated to seeing Nebraskans win on every playing field.

Cornhusker Wheel Club 1988

Automobile dealers in Nebraska are contributing a large measure of help to the University of Nebraska athletic program through the loan of courtesy cars. Like other programs which are a part of the Cornhusker booster group activities, this project enables the Nebraska Athletic Department to make greater use of its funds.

These sports-minded dealers around the state have earned a debt of gratitude from the University of Nebraska Athletic Department. They are an important part of the "team" that includes players, coaches, administration, faculty, staff, students, alumni, Husker Educational Award group, Touchdown Club, Extra Point Club, Beef Club and the courtesy car program.

A few reasons we make more than one car.

No two people are the same. Everybody expects something different from their car or truck.

That's why Nissan offers lots of different models. With hundreds of different color and body-style combinations. And thousands of equipment options.

From the economical Sentra™ To the famous high-performance 300ZX. To the rugged Hardbody™ trucks. To the revolutionary 4x4 Pathfinder®.

Yet, as different as each may be, they all have one very important thing in common. Every Nissan is a pleasure to own and drive. Because at Nissan, we never forget why we build cars and trucks.

THE EVOLUTION OF STATISTICS

by Mike Babcock,
Lincoln (Neb.) Journal & Star

Napoleon McCallum's Division I record 7,172 yards rushing in four years is an impressive statistic...

...but if Red Grange had competed today, he might have surpassed McCallum's total by a few thousand yards. ▼

Jim Van Valkenburg, director of statistics for the NCAA, once projected that if Harold "Red" Grange had played in college football's modern era, he might have amassed more than 9,600 all-purpose running yards during his career.

The projection was more than an attempt to fill idle time. "I try to keep reminding people about the old-timers," Van Valkenburg said. "They had some unbelievable numbers."

People probably don't have to be reminded that Grange, who scored four touchdowns in the first 12 minutes of a game against Michigan, was one of the greatest players in college football history.

You won't find his name in the statistical record book published by the NCAA, however, not only because official NCAA football statistics don't date back to the 1920s, when Grange played, but also because modern players, for the most part, have far surpassed the statistical efforts of even the most famous of their predecessors.

The legendary Galloping Ghost from Wheaton, Ill., was credited with 3,510 all-purpose running yards, a total determined by adding rushing, receiving and return (punts, kickoffs and interceptions) yards.

The official collegiate record for all-purpose yards in a three-year career (5,749) is held by Georgia's Herschel Walker. Navy's Napoleon McCallum holds the Division I record for a four-year career with 7,172 yards, twice Grange's total. Howard Stevens, who played two seasons at Randolph-Macon and two seasons at Louisville, holds the all-time NCAA record, 7,564 yards.

Each of those totals is impressive. And each is a measure of the athlete who produced them. They are not, however, an accurate means of comparing the athletes.

The game has changed dramatically over the years. "I don't see how you can compare at all," Van Valkenburg said. "The only thing you can say for sure is the people who block and tackle are going to win the game."

An obvious problem in using statistics to compare Grange's career to that of Stevens, McCallum or Walker is illustrated by the fact that the NCAA acknowledges two records, one for three seasons, another for four.

Because of that, Grange could more appropriately be compared to Walker, it would seem. But Walker played in 33 games in three seasons, while Grange played in 20 of 24 games during his three-year career at Illinois.

Because of the freshman eligibility rule, McCallum had an opportunity to play in 44 games during his career. (Bowl game statistics aren't included in a player's total.)

Seasons were shorter when Grange played—the opening game in each of his seasons was played the first week in October—and so were the games.

"In Red Grange's day, games were approximately 120 plays long; now they're 145 to 150 plays," Van Valkenburg said.

If teams run 20 percent more plays now, it's reasonable to assume they'll gain 20 percent more yards. Van Valkenburg took that into account when he projected 9,600 all-purpose running yards for Grange.

"People say you can't assume Grange could maintain that pace, and they're right," said Van Valkenburg. "But remember, the old-timers had to turn around and play defense, too."

Because of free substitution and the resulting specialization, statistics from different eras are misleading when used for comparison.

Consider the implications. Marcus Allen, who carried the ball as many times for Southern Cal in 1981 as Grange did during his entire career, could rest while the Trojan defense was on the field. And Allen could run out of bounds without worrying about having to take the next handoff near the sideline. The hash marks have been moved more toward the center of the field.

In Grange's time, "when a player went

Although some consider Jim McMahon a throwback to another era, his Brigham Young numbers would have been much different had he really played in the 1930s.

out of bounds, they put the ball just barely in bounds [for the next play from scrimmage]," Van Valkenburg said. "Half the team was lining up out of bounds, and Grange could go only one direction. Playing defense became pretty simple."

Under those circumstances, where could a guy go?

"You just put everybody on one side of the ball," said Van Valkenburg.

The average fan might not be able to see it, but the location of the hash marks can make a big difference. When he left the National Football League to become head coach at Michigan State, George Perles was asked to pinpoint the most significant difference between the college and pro games. He insisted it was the location of the hash marks.

There are other factors that influence statistics from different eras and render them useless in comparing players: artificial playing surfaces, changes in the shape and size of the ball, improved equipment—face masks weren't made legal until 1951—the advent of the T-formation and rules affecting the forward pass.

How can you compare Brigham Young's Jim McMahon to Texas Christian's Davey O'Brien by using their passing statistics? Like Van Valkenburg says, you can't.

O'Brien led the nation in passing in 1937, the first season for which the NCAA acknowledged statistics, and in 1938.

In 1938 the 5-7, 150-pound Single-

Wing tailback led the Horned Frogs to an undefeated season and won the Heisman Trophy by rushing 124 times for 390 yards and completing 93 of 167 passes for 1,457 yards and 19 touchdowns. He also, of course, played defense. He punted, returned punts and kickoffs, and kicked extra points.

McMahon's only concern was throwing passes, which he did 445 times in 12 games in 1980. O'Brien attempted 434 passes during his entire career.

McMahon completed 284 for 4,571 yards and 47 touchdowns.

The circumference of the ball was reduced to make passing easier, and teams were allowed more than one incomplete pass during a four-down series in 1934. But O'Brien still had to live with a rule requiring a passer to be at least five yards behind the line of scrimmage. That wasn't changed until 1945.

Prior to 1938, teams lost possession of the ball for incomplete passes thrown into the end zone. In 1938 the rule was changed so that touchbacks were awarded for incompletions in the end zone only on fourth down.

And in 1941, fourth-down incomplete passes in the end zone were no longer ruled touchbacks. The defending team took possession at the spot from which the ball was put in play.

One of the most significant rule changes favoring the passing game in recent seasons came in 1985, when offensive linemen were allowed to use open hands and extended arms in pass blocking. It's easy to understand why quarterbacks who complete better than 60 percent of their passes are becoming commonplace.

The NCAA single-season record for completion percentage, set by Brigham Young's Steve Young in 1983, is a remarkable .713. Young accomplished that with 429 attempts, and he was intercepted only 10 times.

O'Brien threw nearly twice as many

The number of successful field goals jumped dramatically after a 1959 rule increased the width between the goal posts by nearly five feet.

interceptions (18) in about half as many attempts (234) during the 1937 season.

Comparisons of players from different eras based on statistics are misleading, at best. Prior to 1937, they're virtually impossible because there were no uniform statistics kept, if any were kept at all.

For example, Willie Heston, a consensus All-America in 1903 and 1904, apparently played in 36 games during a four-year career at Michigan. But his statistics are available for only 17 of those games.

According to Van Valkenburg, Homer F. Cooke Jr., a Seattle sportswriter, established the first national clearing house for college football statistics, at his own expense.

Cooke, who also compiled statistics for the National Basketball Association and the All-American Football Conference, was first subsidized by the NCAA in 1946, an association that continued, except for a brief period in 1949, until 1973, when Cooke retired.

College football statistics weren't standardized until 1941. "Before that, forget it," Van Valkenburg said. "Everybody had their own system."

For example, some might measure a punt from the line of scrimmage, others from the point at which the ball was punted.

Fielding H. Yost, a member of the American Football Coaches Association Rules Committee in 1941, was primarily responsible for standardizing college football statistics. The legendary Michigan coach and athletic director is credited with writing the first scoring rules.

"From then on, they [statistics] were pretty uniform, pretty accurate," said Van Valkenburg.

Statistics compiled prior to the ambitious efforts of Cooke and the standardization headed up by Yost are suspect, at best, except for those of the immortal players like Grange. Thanks to Steve Boda Jr., associate director of statistics for the NCAA, Grange's statistics have been verified as much as possible.

During Grange's time, newspapers carried play-by-play accounts of college games. Boda made more than 100 round trips to the Library of Congress, at his own expense, to research the career of Grange and several other college greats, according to Van Valkenburg. Prior to 1937, "the only statistics I believe are Boda's," he said.

David Nelson, secretary-editor of the NCAA Football Rules Committee for the last 25 years, was asked to identify the most significant rule changes over the last 50 years. Among those he chose were:

- Unlimited substitution, which "changed the game dramatically; it increased the tempo and intensity of the game," Nelson said.

- The 1959 rule that widened the goal posts from 18' 6" to 23' 4" and allowed field goal kickers to use two-inch kicking tees (in 1958 there were 103 successful field goals; in 1984 there were 1,442).

- Several rules having to do with the forward pass, including the previously mentioned one eliminating the requirement that the passer had to be at least five yards behind the line of scrimmage.

TO A RADAR GUN THEY LOOK EXACTLY ALIKE.

Forget the fact that the car on the left is a legendary performance car. And that the one on the right is a wagon.

A radar gun doesn't notice minor details like that. It focuses on only one thing: speed.

And from that point of view, the Porsche 944 and the Volvo 740 Turbo Wagon look remarkably similar.

In fact, in repeated quarter-mile tests, they came up with virtually identical numbers—both in elapsed time and miles-per-hour. In 0-60 tests, the Volvo wagon actually came out ahead of the Porsche.* Which is no small feat for any car, much less a wagon.

It's no wonder Road & Track magazine called the 740 Turbo Wagon the closest thing to a five-door sports car.

Which all goes to prove that the Volvo 740 Turbo Wagon is something very rare indeed:

A wagon that's actually worth owning for what it packs up front.

- Safety and equipment for safety, most notably a 1971 rule change that prohibited blocking below the waist and thus cut down on the number of knee injuries.

- The rules increasing the number of officials from four in 1937 to the current seven in 1983.

- Legalization of coaching from the sidelines in 1967.

- The ones affecting statistics.

"Statistics are the gauge, the barometer . . . they are absolutely critical and essential for the Rules Committee for stabilizing the game," according to Nelson.

They are not, however, an effective means of comparing great players from different eras.

Jim Thorpe rushed for 1,869 yards in 14 games in 1912. He scored 29 touchdowns, converted 38 extra points and kicked four field goals.

Allen won the Heisman Trophy in 1981 after rushing for 2,342 yards and 22 touchdowns in 11 games.

What do those numbers mean?

Thorpe and Allen were both great players.

But they can't be compared with statistics. The numbers may not lie, but they don't tell the entire truth, either. Times have changed too much. □

The evolution of college football has been consistent with the belief that records are made to be broken. Most of the modern records in the NCAA football guide, which dates back to 1937, were set in the last 25 years.

Teams play more games, with more snaps per game, than they did in 1937. Playing conditions have improved dramatically. And the rules have been changed in ways that produce more offense.

As a result, it's difficult to find NCAA records that have stood the test of time . . . not impossible, just difficult. If you look hard enough, you'll even find a few modern (post-1937) NCAA records that probably never will be broken.

There's one, for sure. And you're going to get a kick out of it. On Nov. 11, 1939, Texas Tech played Centenary in Shreveport, La., in a game that produced 77 punts.

That's right. Rub your eyes and look again—77.

The NCAA guide offers a footnote by way of explanation. The game was played in a "heavy downpour."

Obviously. It was raining footballs.

Think the philosophy of defense has changed a little in the last 50 years?

Texas Tech punted 39 times, a single-game record. Centenary punted 38 times, the No. 2 total on the all-time list.

Equally remarkable is the fact that 67 of the punts came on first downs, including 22 in a row during the third and fourth quarters. That means in one stretch, Texas Tech punted to Centenary, and Centenary turned right around and punted the ball back to Texas Tech—11 times!

Imagine what network officials would have done if the game had been televised.

The NCAA guide notes: 42 of the punts were returned, 19 went out of bounds, 10 were downed, one went into the end zone for a touchback, four were blocked and one was fair-caught.

Texas Tech's Charlie Calhoun punted an NCAA single-game-record 36 times for 1,318 yards or an average of 36.6 yards per punt.

SOME RECORDS ARE MADE TO BE UNBROKEN

The Red Raiders' Milton Hill returned 20 punts in the game, another record that's likely to stand forever, and gained 110 yards.

Not surprisingly, the game also produced NCAA records for the fewest scrimmage plays by one team (Texas Tech's 10) and two teams (31). Texas Tech finished with minus-one yard of offense. Centenary rolled up 30 yards, total.

The final score? You guessed it—0-0.

Among the other modern NCAA football records that probably won't be broken, given the nature of the game now:

- Most consecutive victories (47) by Oklahoma, 1953-57. With changes in scholarship limits, the increasing emphasis on football as a revenue-producer at most major colleges and more attractive inter-sectional matchups for television, teams no longer dominate the way Bud Wilkinson's Sooners did. The string was snapped by Notre Dame, 7-0.

- Most consecutive regular-season shutouts (17) by Tennessee, 1938-40. The same factors that apply to Oklahoma's winning streak apply here, with the added factor that the rules have changed to encourage offense and scoring. Tennessee went a record 71 consecutive quarters without allowing a point, a streak that was ended by Alabama on Oct. 19, 1940.

- Fewest points allowed per game in a season (0.0) by Tennessee in 10 games during the 1939 season and by Duke in nine games during the 1938 season. It's tough enough these days to go undefeated and untied, much less unscored upon. The latter would seem to be impossible.

- Most scoreless tie games in a season (4) by Temple in 1937. Again, the rule changes have led to more plays, more offense, more scoring. It's difficult to believe that even the most inept offensive team could now play four equally inept offensive teams in consecutive weeks. Temple played only nine games in 1937.

- Fewest yards allowed per game in a season (69.9) by Santa Clara in 1937.

- Lowest average yards per play allowed in a season (1.71) by Texas A&M in 1939.

- Fewest rushing yards allowed per game (17.0) by Penn State in 1947. These three records depend, at least in part, on the fact that games had fewer plays 40 or 50 years ago, and teams played shorter schedules. Santa Clara played only eight games in 1937. The Broncos didn't have to maintain their average for as long.

- Highest average gain per play during a season (7.92) by Army in 1945. Yes, this was a Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard team.

- Fewest rushes allowed in a game (7) by North Carolina against Virginia on Nov. 27, 1943. Virginia gained five yards.

- Fewest yards gained, both teams, by passing (minus-13), North Carolina and Pennsylvania on Nov. 13, 1943. North Carolina completed one of three passes for minus-seven yards. Penn completed two of twelve for minus-six yards.

- Most two-point attempts made in a game (6) by Jim Pilot of New Mexico State against Hardin-Simmons on Nov. 25, 1961. Very few individual records have managed to survive the changes in the game. With specialization and an increased emphasis on placekicking, however, it's unlikely that a team, much less an individual player, would even attempt six two-point conversions in a game. For the record, Pilot failed on a seventh.

- Most all-purpose running yards gained per game (246.3) by Byron "Whizzer" White of Colorado in 1937. It's conceivable that someone could break this record, although specialization and the physical demands of an 11-game regular-season schedule, not to mention the speed and strength of players, would seem to make it difficult. White gained 1,970 yards in eight games: 1,121 rushing, 103 on interception returns, 587 on punt returns and 159 on kickoff returns. —Mike Babcock

FANS HELP TEAMS STAY IN THE GAME

To some people, big-money boosters represent a seamy side of college athletics.

People with hefty pocket-books and hearty appetites for an association with college sports are sometimes at the center of National Collegiate Athletic Association violations that rock a program. The boosters' best intentions—in the days of the Death Penalty for repeated rules violators in college sports—can practically kill a program.

But there is another faction of big-money boosters who have a different kind of effect on college athletics. They are the ones who enable collegiate sports programs to live.

The cost of running a major-college program is steep. Without the financial contributions of supporters, most athletic programs would wither away.

"No way," Don Winston said when asked if a Division I program could operate in the black without fund raising. Winston, an associate athletic director at the University of Southern California, is in charge of fund raising.

"No school in the country makes enough money from gate receipts and football bowls and television to operate," Winston said. "It's just too costly. By and large, all athletic programs depend greatly on gifts from private sources in order to balance their budget."

When athletic administrators like Winston talk about fan support, they are not just talking about somebody who fills the stadium seats and makes some noise for the home team by putting his hands together. They are talking about someone who can also use those hands to pass a check on to his favorite athletic department.

Plenty of people do that, and the checks add up.

At USC $5.8 million was raised last year in athletic fund raising. The money helps USC pay for scholarships, which amount to $17,000 per year per athlete.

Despite the annual giving, the hefty cost of tuition at the private school can be prohibitive. So USC set up an endowment fund a couple of years ago to help with scholarship costs.

FUND RAISING

'The cost of running a major-college program is steep. Without the financial contributions of supporters, most athletic programs would wither away.'

For a one-time $250,000 donation, a Trojan supporter can "buy" a position on the football team. The money is an endowment, and the interest pays the cost of one player's scholarship each year. In the first 18 months of the program, 16 of the 24 starting positions were "sold."

Winston said the $5.8 million raised last year may have made the Trojans No. 1 in the country in athletic fund raising. Winning the Pacific-10 Conference title and going to the Rose Bowl didn't hurt any, either.

"Going to the Rose Bowl makes us all better fund-raisers," Winston said. "It certainly helps to win."

They have learned that at the University of Iowa, where $4.5 million was generated last year from private donors. That represents almost a third of the athletic department's annual budget. It also represents a gratifying contrast to the days when the Iowa football team was enduring 19 straight non-winning seasons—and feeling it in the pocketbook.

And so, when Iowa's football program began its turnaround in the early 1980s, the financial support grew, despite a state economy that was sputtering from the farm crisis.

Iowa athletic director Bump Elliott says supporters donate their dollars to a program because they have an enthusiasm for athletics and feel a closeness to the university.

"When you have a good program, they're anxious to help you," Elliott said of contributors. "If you don't have a good program, when you need help, they don't help you. It's like anything else: Nothing succeeds like success."

Elliott sat in his handsome office at the 15,500-seat Carver-Hawkeye Arena as he spoke. The sparkling $18 million arena, which opened in 1983, was built with the aid of a fund-raising campaign that netted $10 million in six months.

"Contributors are vitally important to our program," Elliott said.

That was not always the case at Ohio State, but it is now.

Dave Nicolls, the Buckeyes' director of athletic development, said that as recently as 1978 Ohio State had no fund-raising program. But the growing emphasis on women's sports and increasing inflation caused Ohio State to seek private funds.

It has had no trouble finding them.

Last year Ohio State raised $4.5 million, which represented about 20 percent of its athletic budget. Currently the Buckeyes are in the middle of a separate $45 million capital campaign to build an indoor practice facility, a wrestling and volleyball arena, new administrative offices and a hall of fame.

"We have really put a lot of effort into fund raising and marketing that we never had in the past," Nicolls said.

"[Boosters] do want to see Ohio State have athletic excellence here. They just like to be winners at Ohio State, and it costs money to be winners. We have a lot of tradition and heritage here, and people want to continue that."

Tiny Augustana College in Rock Island, Ill., has quite a tradition, also. The school has won four Division III national football titles in the last five years. But, like most smaller schools, success on the football field does not lead directly to more money in the athletic department coffers.

That is because Augie's athletic program is funded just as are the chemistry department and every other department on campus. The money comes from the general budget of the college.

So no donations go directly to the athletic department. Athletic Director John Farwell, however, suspects that the successes on the football field have enhanced donations to the college. Those donations have enabled Augustana to build a new $12 million library.

"There are an awful lot of people who feel good about Augustana College right now," Farwell said. "Athletics probably are a part of what's making people feel good about Augustana."

Farwell does not resent the fact that the football program's success is not directly beneficial to the athletic program.

"If athletics are part of the educational system, they should be funded as part of the educational system, just as the other departments are," Farwell said. "It's still part of the athlete's education. It's treated as such and, therefore, it should be funded as such."

Sometimes boosters have the wrong idea about how their funds should help the university. When their money goes directly to a recruit or an athlete, instead of to the school's fund-raising effort, the boosters are doing their team a disservice. A university can be sanctioned for those actions, even though the boosters are usually outside of the university's control.

People in the Southwest Conference know all about that. Four of the league's nine football teams were on NCAA probation last year, and boosters were named in the violations at all four schools, usually for illegal recruiting.

Therefore, the conference sponsored NCAA legislation to eliminate boosters from the recruiting process. Effective Aug. 1 of last year, boosters at Division I schools cannot have any contact with a recruit.

Southwest Conference commissioner Fred Jacoby feels that boosters' contributions are important, but that universities, not boosters, must determine how the money is used.

"[Money from supporters] must be institutionally controlled, that's the main thing," Jacoby said.

It's a system that works. □

A CHANGE OF SCENERY

by Mary Schmitt,
Milwaukee Journal

Dave Prinzivalli couldn't have gone to college much farther away from home. Prinzivalli, a 6-1 junior offensive guard at the University of Notre Dame, is from Kaneohe, Hawaii, halfway around the world from South Bend, Ind.

And yet, believe it or not, there are some similarities between the two towns, Prinzivalli said.

"I would say people in both communities are always trying to promote their communities," said Prinzivalli, whose father and brother also went to Notre Dame. "They have a pride in their community. In Hawaii we try to show our pride in showing our aloha to tourists. In South Bend they have the motto 'alive with pride,' trying to keep the spirits up about where they live."

Prinzivalli is one of any number of college football players who must go through serious culture shock when they leave home for college. Whether it's going from one climate to another, one culture to another, one landscape to another or one extreme to another, there are all kinds of adjustments to be made.

Some players choose schools far away from home just to experience those adjustments. Prinzivalli did.

"I wanted to get away from Hawaii to be able to appreciate what Hawaii is," said Prinzivalli. "One thing that I really wanted to experience was the four seasons, so I could make a choice for myself later on in life, whether I wanted to live in a place that had the four seasons or not."

Just for the record, South Bend definitely has four seasons. And while Prinzivalli did experience his first snowfall, he is still awaiting his first real white Christmas.

Tyrone Campbell's choice to leave Miami for Madison, Wis., and Warde Manuel's choice to leave New Orleans for Ann Arbor, Mich., were also influenced by a desire to start making their own decisions.

"I really wanted to get away from home," said Campbell, a junior running back at the University of Wisconsin. "I really wanted to experience something different from what I was used to. That was probably the biggest part of my decision. And I don't really see anything similar. Life here is much slower, much less materially oriented. I like the lifestyle a little bit better. It's different. I don't have to be on the ball all the time, always looking out for myself. It's a little bit more laid back. I like that. I'm happy."

Said Manuel, a junior defensive tackle at the University of Michigan, "I kind of wanted to get away from home and see the world, get away from my parents and learn to make decisions on my own."

But a couple of Manuel's decisions have backfired. Seeking a taste of his hometown New Orleans cuisine, Manuel sampled the local interpretation. "I ordered creole shrimp at a restaurant, and the thing I found funny was that everything that says 'creole' here is too hot even for me," he said. "They use a lot of pepper and it's really hot. Creole or Cajun food uses different spices. Everybody thinks Cajun food is really hot, but that's not true. It's just well-seasoned. When I go to a restaurant here, I've learned not to order Cajun food."

He made one other mistake early on.

"Basically, I like cold weather," he explained. "The weather didn't deter me. My mom, though, was always talking about not getting frostbite. So the first time it got cold—about 40 degrees—I threw on some long johns. Boy, the other guys really got on me. I wasn't really scared of the cold. I just had this thing about frostbite instilled in me, so I wanted to be prepared. It was the last day I wore those long johns."

Campbell had a similar experience when he left for Madison. "I took my recruiting trip in December 1985," Campbell said. "It was mostly below zero that particular December. It was horrible. But I came with an open mind. There's no way that I was going to let the weather get ahead of a good education and a good opportunity."

His parents, in the meantime, had an open closet.

"They sent me every coat that we ever owned," Campbell said, laughing. "They sent me my ski suit, every coat that my dad ever owned, his college letterman's jacket, numerous pairs of long johns. It was just hilarious." Campbell was asked if the hilarity wore off after the football season ended and the winter wore on.

"Actually, it's harder during the season," he said. "In the offseason you can be inside. You don't have to practice."

Wisconsin sophomore quarterback Otis Flowers of Houston agreed, especially during spring practice, with temperatures in the 30s and a brisk wind whipping around Camp Randall Stadium in Madison. "I can't believe they call this spring practice," he said. "It's really cold. Back in Houston, it's 79 degrees and sunny. That's spring weather."

While Prinzivalli, Manuel, Campbell and Flowers all went from warm climates to cold, Scott Hoffman did just the opposite. He went from Elgin, Ill., to the University of Florida, where he is a freshman this season. Amazingly, he said, the weather didn't have much to do with his decision.

"Actually, I was looking at the amount of playing time available, the opportunity to step in and play as soon as possible," he said.

He admitted that the weather during his recruiting trip didn't hurt, however.

A couple of years earlier, Hoffman and his parents had been visiting his grandmother in Clearwater, Fla., for Christmas. They drove down from Illinois and stopped to visit the university on their way back home. Once they got to Gainesville, they rolled down all the windows and took off their jackets.

Hoffman had the same sensation when he went back to Florida on his recruiting trip last November.

"I remember it was the same feeling as when we were down there and had the windows open," he said. "When we got off the plane, instead of coming into an airport, they just pulled out the stairs and you walked right out on the ground. That was pretty different. But I was hoping for it to be like that. I was expecting it to be really warm. It was pretty nice the whole weekend."

But you're still saying the weather wasn't a factor in picking Florida? "I'd definitely say it wasn't," Campbell said. "I actually like the winter in Chicago. I love the warm just as much, but I think I'll miss the snow. It's always pretty much the same in Florida, I think."

Mike Murray must have felt as if he were down on the farm when he left the south side of Chicago for Lincoln, Neb.

"I thought the town was a little small, but you get used to it," said Murray, a junior middle guard at the University of Nebraska. "There are a lot of smaller cities than Lincoln. It's big enough so that it's all right. It's a big little city."

But there are plenty of differences between Chicago, Ill., and Lincoln, Neb.

"The airport is a little different from O'Hare—about two terminals," Murray said, laughing. "There's not the hustle and bustle here. I live downtown, so there are people around, but it's nothing compared to downtown Chicago. And the traffic's not even close. Things definitely slowed down a little bit, but I wasn't a maniac at home, either. Still, it is different."

Like all the athletes interviewed, though, Murray was thankful for the chance to experience different places and different things. Many had selected their schools just for that kind of chance. Murray, like the others, thought the experience helped him to grow. And it was while discussing the differences between the two cities he has lived in that Murray said probably the most important thing that could be said by a player who finds himself in a different climate, a different culture, a different landscape or a different pace.

Probably speaking for all the rest of those athletes who've survived their big moves and gotten over their culture shock, he said, "I'm pretty comfortable here right now."

Sure, you could invest your hard-earned money in commodities.

There are lots of investments out there. But few offer the stability and competitive return of U.S. Savings Bonds.

John J. Creedon, President of MetLife and Chairman of the U.S. Savings Bonds Volunteer Committee.

The money you earn on bonds is hard to beat. If held for only five years, they earn variable market-based interest rates. And it's guaranteed.

Plus, bonds are fully backed by the U.S. Government. So they are one of today's safest investments.

There's more. Savings Bonds are free of state and local income taxes on the interest you earn. You can buy them where you bank or through the payroll savings plan at work. For more information, just call: 1-800-US BONDS.

U.S. Savings Bonds. They're safe. They're high yielding, and they don't need to be fed.

Most people think heart disease happens only in the elderly.

It happens in children as well. Things like rheumatic heart disease and congenital heart defects. Each year, nearly one million Americans of all ages die of heart disease and stroke. And 20,000 of them die from childhood heart diseases.

The American Heart Association is fighting to reduce early death and disability from heart disease and stroke with research, professional and public education, and community service programs.

But more needs to be done.

You can help us save young lives by sending your dollars today to your local Heart Association, listed in your telephone directory.

Put your money where your Heart is.

If you want America to keep its competitive edge, do something about it.

Support America's colleges. Because college is more than a place where young people are preparing for their future. It's where America is preparing for its future.

If our country's going to get smarter, stronger—and more competitive—our colleges and universities simply must become a national priority.

Government. Business. And you. We're all in this together. Because it's our future.

So help America keep its competitive edge with a gift to the college of your choice—and you'll know you've done your part.

Give to the college of your choice.

Nebraska Trophy Winners

JOHNNY RODGERS

1972 Heisman Trophy

One of the most exciting players in the history of college football, Rodgers won the 38th annual Heisman Trophy as the nation's outstanding collegiate player in 1972. A two-time consensus All-America wingback, Rodgers became the Huskers' first Heisman winner as he outdistanced Oklahoma's Greg Pruitt and Husker teammate Rich Glover. The most dangerous player ever to wear the Cornhusker Scarlet and Cream, "Johnny the Jet" threatened to go all the way every time he touched the ball, as he averaged 15 yards per touch during his junior year, which still stands as an NCAA record. He also shares the NCAA record for the most punt returns for touchdowns in a career, seven.

MIKE ROZIER

1983 Heisman Trophy

Rozier capped an outstanding three-year career by becoming the Huskers' second Heisman Trophy winner after a phenomenal senior season that saw him rewrite the Husker rushing and scoring record book. He outdistanced Brigham Young quarterback Steve Young to win the award after piling up a NCAA-record 929 yards on the ground in the Huskers' final four regular-season games. Rozier finished the 1983 season with 2,148 yards, the second highest in NCAA history behind USC's Marcus Allen (2,342 on 403 carries in 1981). However, considering Rozier's NCAA season record of 7.8 yards per carry, he would have amassed 3,148 yards in '83 if he had carried the ball as often as Allen.

Mike Rozier became Nebraska's first NCAA rushing champion.

Johnny Rodgers broke OU's back in the "Game of the Century."

LARRY JACOBSON

Nebraska's first Outland winner, Jacobson won the trophy as the defensive left tackle on the Huskers' 1971 national championship team. A Lombardi finalist, the 6-6, 247-pound native of Sioux Falls, S.D., gathered All-America and All-Big Eight honors during his senior campaign. Jacobson also excelled in the classroom and was the top vote-getter on the 1971 Academic All-America team.

RICH GLOVER

A two-time All-American, Glover capped an outstanding senior year by sweeping national honors in 1972, winning both the Outland Award and the Lombardi Trophy. Glover's Outland Award gave Nebraska the distinction of being the first school to win back-to-back Outlands, a feat that would be accomplished again a decade later by Huskers Dave Rimington and Dean Steinkuhler. The 6-1, 234-pound middle guard from Jersey City, N.J., also finished third in the 1972 Heisman balloting behind Husker teammate Johnny Rodgers and Oklahoma's Greg Pruitt.

DAVE RIMINGTON

Possibly the most decorated offensive lineman ever to play college football, Rimington became the first and only player to win back-to-back Outland Awards. As a junior in 1981 Rimington was named Big Eight Player of the Year by both wire services and won his first Outland, setting the stage for his senior year, which he capped by sweeping the 1982 Outland and Lombardi Trophies. A two-time consensus All-America center from Omaha, Neb., Rimington became the second Husker to sweep the lineman awards and his consecutive Outland honors brought Nebraska the distinction of being the only school to win back-to-back Outland Awards twice, as he duplicated Larry Jacobson (1971) and Rich Glover's (1972) feat by himself.

DEAN STEINKUHLER

Nebraska again boasted the nation's top lineman in 1983 as Dean Steinkuhler, a 6-3, 270-pound offensive guard from Burr, Neb., swept national honors by lugging home the Outland and Lombardi Trophies, giving Nebraska an unprecedented three straight Outlands and two straight Lombardis. With Steinkuhler's teammate Mike Rozier winning the Heisman, Nebraska is the only school to win the top three honors in a season, and the Huskers have done it twice, first turning the trick in 1972 when Johnny Rodgers won the Heisman and Rich Glover took home the Outland and Lombardi.

THE TOUCHDOWN CLUB OF NEBRASKA

One of the groups most instrumental in helping the University of Nebraska Athletic Department grow in the field of intercollegiate sports is the Nebraska Touchdown Club.

Contributions from TD Club members have enabled the Cornhuskers to build a fine grant-in-aid program and continued support from the Touchdown Club, and groups like the Husker Achievement Awards, the Extra Point Club, and the Cornhusker Beef Club, will insure that the Nebraska Cornhuskers will always hold a prominent place in the college sports world.

The University of Nebraska Athletic Department salutes the many members of the Touchdown Club and takes this opportunity to say a sincere "Thank You."

Touchdown Club members (as of Aug. 23, 1988) contributing $200 or more are:

No tickets required for open houses on UNL campus Friday and Saturday

You don't need a ticket to take in an afternoon or morning event on the UNL campus during "Celebrate Nebraska—Celebrate UNL." Open houses will be held Friday and Saturday by many departments and areas of the University.

UNL libraries will offer opportunities to view the latest in computer technology as applied to library systems on both the City and East Campus.

Open houses will be held in Love Library on City Campus and C.Y. Thompson Library on East Campus from noon to 5 p.m. Friday, and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday at Love Library only.

Featured at both locations will be demonstrations of computer assisted search services, including the CD-RAM (Compact Disk-Read Only Memory) system which enables students to quickly locate journal articles published on a particular topic. The service is offered at both libraries at no charge.

Library personnel will also show how to use another service for which charges ranging from $1 to $5 per minute are assessed. This Fee-Based Computer Search Service enables a user to utilize more than 300 data bases to obtain needed information concerning information sources and even direct information on such subjects as specific chemical processes or compounds or corporate financial reports.

Library staff members will also call up computerized catalog systems now in use by other university libraries to demonstrate how UNL's own computerized system will work once it is in place within the next year or two.

Other open houses on campus will offer glimpses of many other activities and functions performed in different areas.

The Great Plains Studies Art Collection on the 2nd floor of Love Library will give a 30-minute tours of its special exhibition of paintings by cowboy artists from 10 a.m. to noon, and the Department of Art's new gallery at 102 Richards Hall will have a special exhibition entitled "Chairs" open from 1-4 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m.-Noon Saturday.

Other open houses:

—Department of Chemistry will display and demonstrate modern chemical and biochemical research facilities in Room 548 Hamilton Hall all day Friday.

—The Bureau of Business Research will show its Coe Computer Center in 26 College of Business administration.

—Students and staff of the Debate and Forensic Program will host an open house in 323-324 Burnett Hall.

—The Department of Geology will host an open house from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday in 305 Bessey Hall.

—The Modern Languages Department will have an open house in 1107 Oldfather Hall from 2-4 p.m. Friday.

—The College of Architecture will have an exhibit on "Mies Van Der Rohe: Architect as Educator" in the main gallery of Architecture Hall, and will demonstrate computer graphics in Rooms 202 and 23.

—Teachers College will have an open house from 9 a.m.-Noon Saturday in the main lounge of Henzlik Hall.

—The Department of Actuarial Science will have a social hour in 311 Burnett Hall from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday.

The English Department will have an open house in 229 Andrews from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday.

Fun run, talent show, volleyball tourney are early week Homecoming activities

For those who can't wait for the weekend, there will be a number of events beginning Monday, Oct. 10 that are included as part of the 1988 Homecoming celebration at UNL.

UNL and Lincoln radio station KFRX will sponsor a Fun Run at 3:30 p.m. Monday starting from the Nebraska Union.

Those who don't want to literally get off and running with the starter's gun at the Fun Run can take part in other activities during the week. There will, for instance, be a performance of "The Quilters" by the UNL Theatre Company at 8 p.m. Monday, as well as additional performances in Howell Theatre through Saturday, Oct. 15.

The UNL Performance Series will offer the Maria Benitez Spanish

Dance company at 8 p.m. Monday in Kimball Recital Hall, and jazz saxophonist Gerry Mulligan can be heard in concert at 8 p.m. Friday in Kimball.

The play and Performance Series events require an admission charge, as will the UNL Planetarium's Laser Shows which will be held at 8 p.m., 9:30 p.m. and 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday, in the Planetarium of the Nebraska State Museum, 13th and U Streets.

The planetarium, however, will offer a free Star Show on "The Milky Way" at 1 p.m., 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. Friday. The University of Nebraska State Museum, including the Encounter Center, will be open from (9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.) Also listed as a "Celebrate Nebraska" event will be a print sale in the Nebraska Union sponsored by the University Program Council in the Nebraska Union all day Monday-Friday.

Other events during the week will include a Sand Volleyball Tournament Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons starting at 3:30 p.m. Tournament matches will be played at several courts on campus. Also, a Student Talent Show will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Centennial Room of the Nebraska Union. The winners of the talent show will present a show at noon on the NBC Bank Plaza, and the UNL Pep Band will also march around the downtown area during the lunch hour.
